ABOUT THE SEMINAR

Despite serious developmental efforts of the state and the civil society, the Dalits still remain excluded from economic, cultural, social and political benefits that accrued to a large number of other communities. They cannot, even in the technologically advanced world, escape from the vicious fangs of the age-old social institution of 'caste'.

In spite of implementing several schemes and plans for dalit empowerment for the last seventy five years of independent India, the socio-economic and political status still sets them apart from the other upper castes and backward classes. Government reservations have increased their number in schools, colleges and government institutions but they do not alone materialise the much awaited goal of social inclusion. For, still can be seen the discrimination, oppression and the silent suffering of the dalits in various forms and magnitude across the country.

The strong hegemonic sentiment is adversely affecting the incessant efforts of the government to benefit this most marginalised group in India and made them remain an underclass in the debris of institutionalised discrimination and marginalisation. Therefore, the Dalits must raise their voice against the organised negligence, question the entire methodology for not producing effective outcomes and strive for equality, full participation, greater autonomy, respect and honour for their ceaseless and untiring contribution for the welfare of the society.

MESSAGE

Greetings...

It gives me a sense of academic fulfilment that our Department of Economics and Department of English jointly organized a RUSA sponsored Two-Day National Conference on 'the Holistic Development of the Dalits' successfully which took place on 28th & 29th of December, 2021. I am happy that the Conference gave way to bringing out the International Journal Special Issue at www.langlit.org accommodating a brilliant collection of bonafide research papers presented in the conference.

Our Hon'ble Commissioner & RUSA, State Project Director Sri Navin Mittal, IAS and Dr Soundarya Joseph, RUSA, State Project Officer have extended their kind support and cooperation in organizing the Conference and publishing the Conference Journal known for its fangs of index and impact factor replete with research ethics and UGC approved prospective accordingly. Our institution is ever thankful to the Academic Cell and the good offices of the Hon'ble Commissionerate of Collegiate Education, Telangana, Hyderabad.

I congratulate the In-charges, Faculty and students of the college and those of Departments of Economics and English in specific on this occasion. I am pleased to acknowledge the contribution of the conference conveners, organizers, and members on different committees, resource persons and guests, presenters, participants, parents, students and well-wishers of the college on this occasion

Dear Readers,

Welcome to the Langlit Journal Publication under the Special Issue in the light of the One Day National Conference held with ISSN of an International Peer Review Open Access Journal, given out on behalf of the Production Editor with the Editorial Board concerned as the December 2021 Issue.

On behalf of the Departments of Economics and English of the much sought after institution SR&BGNR Government Arts and Science, Khammam, we are pleased to present the UGC Approved "Conference Journal" bearing the ISSN wherein "Complete Papers" thus presented are accommodated @ www.langlit.org, which facilitates the contributors in turn toward the RUSA sponsored Two Day National Conference on 'The Holistic Development of the Dalits' which took place on the 28th and 29th of December, 2021. One of the goals of the Publication of this Journal under Special Edition is to encourage publication from a variety of research streams to expand the conversation on the conference's theme among the intelligentsia in the cross-section of the researchers' cult. Readers will see progress in this direction through the Conference Journal, which is the ISSN embedded in the Full Papers.

While we gratefully acknowledge Langlit: An International Peer-Reviewed and Open Access Journal with an Impact Factor of 5.61 for publishing the Conference Journal with an ISSN, we do recognise the stakeholders whose contributions to this modest volume of research brainwaves delved into various prospects for the Dalits' holistic development and bounty are extremely important. By the way, the "Langlit" is already indexed in the Directory of Open Access Journals and in ICI, Google Scholar, Research Gate, Academia.edu, IBI, IIFC, DRJI, and the Cite Factor, to name a few! Concisely, Langlit is a publication dedicated to breakthroughs in language and humanities. It publishes work that speaks to the discipline, including thoughts on current research and the literature's significance in the world outside of academia. All of these are possible indicators of professional competence and achievements.

To return to the topic at hand, the Indian government's most significant problem in reducing the social impacts of the caste system, which remain ingrained in Indian culture, has been securing Dalit access to education. Over the past one hundred and fifty years, there have been numerous initiatives to improve the quality of life for India's Dalits through development centred on lifestyles and jobs. There have been multiple proposals, both traditional and modern, on addressing the challenges in Dalit holistic development. There is Dalit Literature available at this time. Dalit literature encapsulates the Dalit community's collective consciousness of centuries of social, political, economic, and racial persecution. Dalit writing is a phenomenon that emerged after independence. The advent of Dalit writing is a watershed moment in history. Dalits have long been on the periphery of Indian society. In an aesthetic sense, Dalit literature refers to works of literature depicting the Dalits' anguish - family breakdown, poverty, humiliation, makeshift living conditions, etc. The untouchables, through their portrayal, speak loudly across a caste-ridden society, destroying the upper-vaunted class's purity. The liberation of Dalits is the primary goal of Dalit literature. The anger and resentment of Dalits against the social inequality come out in the grab of Dalit Literature. Keeping this in view, contributors have carried out genuine research papers bonafide enough for paper presentations at the conference and publication of the Conference Proceedings on the day of the conference and Conference Journal now as Special Issue. Of course, the Langlit deserves all credit for spreading it beyond frontiers accordingly.
