A REPORT ON SOFT SKILLS

Soft skills play an important role for achieving professional growth and employment.

With the knowledge of soft skills, one stand out in a crowd of job seekers with even mediocre skill and talent. There is no doubt that hard skills i.e. knowledge and technical expertise are prime requirement, for employability but without soft skills it becomes difficult for even highly talented people to corner a job.

The most common traits asked by every prospective employer are positive work ethics, good attitude, and desire to learn and be trained. Good attitude being a behavioural skill cannot be taught. But consistent practice and training can instil that in a person.
