"English is around us"

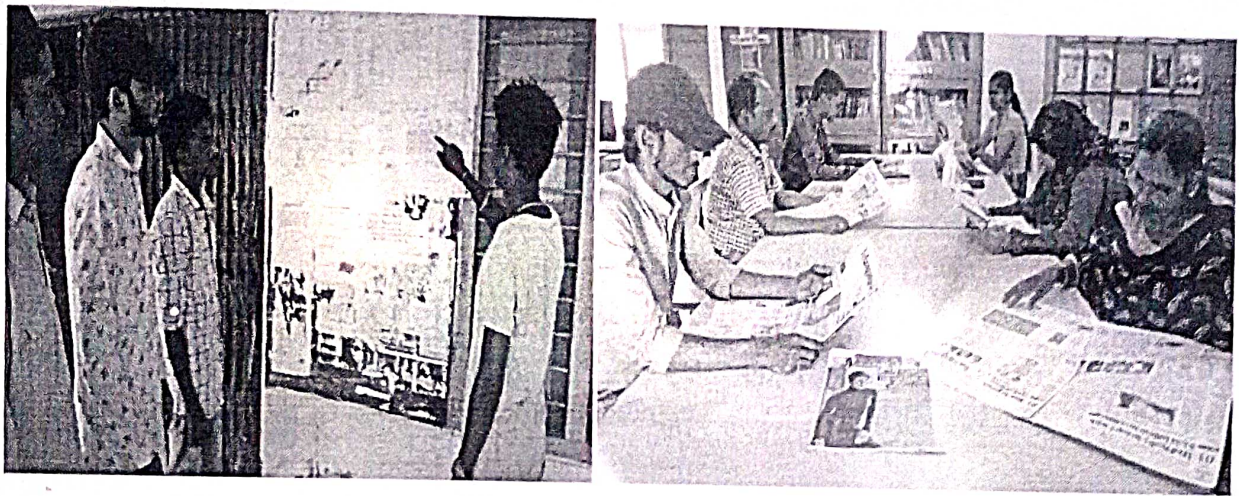

English is very important language nowadays. because it is the only language that links the whole world together. unites it. English can be used as a language in any part of the world as it is lingua franca. People speaking English might not have the same accent as others. but the language at least will be understandable. In recent years, there has been a rapid progress in the demographics of English speaking communities around the world with a growth in the number of users and learners of English. In most cases these learners and users are those who would have been classified as non-native speakers. The evolving nature of English in the globalisation context has called for reevaluation of number of key ranges in applied linguistic studies of English.

Language is connected to people, not to a nation-state. in this way, language is the property of whichever country chooses to use it. English is originated in England and consequence of disseminating it through empire. It no longer belongs to England alone.

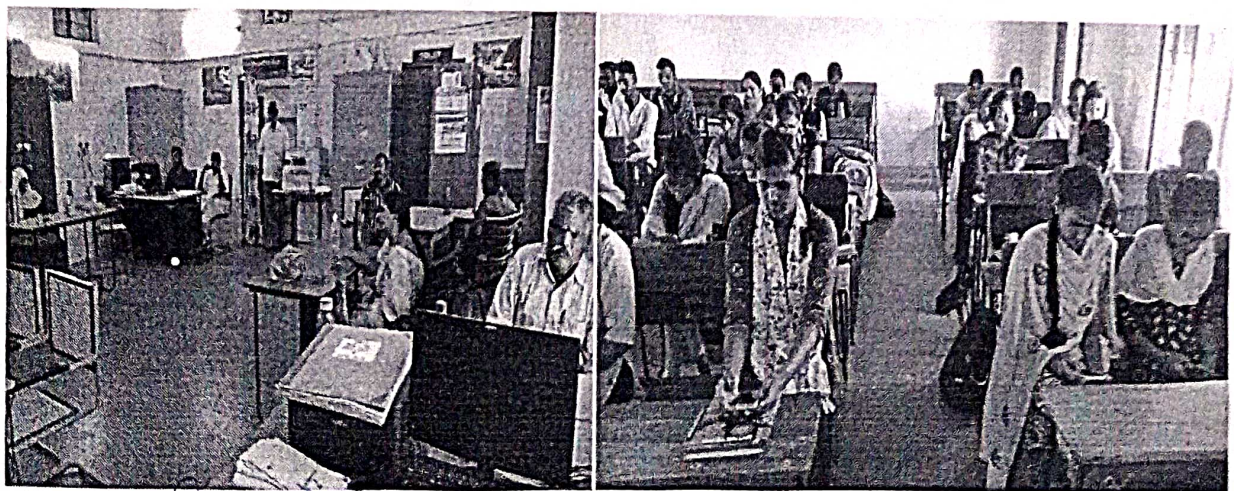

According to Smith Widdowson and Cornagava-Jah are discussing very important and up to date issues of World Englishes.
