Why take this course?

After completing the introductory course, learners will be able to:

- Discuss the poverty and environment nexus and related concepts.
- Identify related international developments, as well as global and regional trends.
- Explain the rationale and drivers behind integrating policy planning.
- Identify challenges and opportunities for advancing an integrated approach.
- Give examples of enabling policy conditions for integrating poverty and environment issues.

ABOUT THE COURSE:

UN SDGs are a roadmap for a paradigm shift in the prevalent economic model. The course tries to establish the underlying understanding behind this UN-led initiative, the value of sustainable development, how it touches our lives, and the efforts required to achieve them. The course intends to elaborate on the evolution of scope under the dynamic concept of sustainability and UN SDGs-led cohesive societal framework to evolve a resilient community worldwide. The course elaborates on seventeen UN SDGs, mapping their systemic perspectives and the need for tomorrow. It talks about the interconnectedness of the planet, products, processes wrt SDGs. It touches on the Paris agreement on climate change, India's participation in it, and its commitment to SDGs. It also shows a glimpse of innovation-led design processes to undertake challenges in its path. The course uses case studies from India and international examples to better understand issues, approaches, and solutions. The newly developed course is framed using state-of-the-art studies, policy documents, reports, and research
