

Government Degree College, Eturnagaram

A one-day online seminar on the development of women and children in rural areas.

Introduction to the seminar

The Government has been emphasising the need for the development of rural women and their involvement in developmental activities. Nevertheless, the five decades of planned development in India have not achieved much for women, especially rural women. A systematic analysis of the status and role of women in rural development strategies started with the National Plan of Action for Women (1976). For the first time, a chapter on Women and Development appeared in the VIth Five-Year Plan (1980-85).

It was observed that the flow of financial assistance to women was too marginal to enable them to cross the poverty line though women, as members of the target group, had been entitled to certain benefits under the Integrated Rural Development Programme (IRDP). It was felt therefore that a separate scheme, which would motivate women to come together and engage themselves in economically viable activities, should be drawn up.
