CONCLUSION

Though inorganic farming is less laborious, eye attracting it is a costlier process and it is claiming many lives every year. Because of the poisoning and health effecting nature of the chemicals, they are directly claiming the lives of many animals, ecofriendly insects and also some farmers working with them. Because of the death of ecofriendly insects, ecological balance is lost. Indirectly because of the remains of chemicals in the food products, many health issues are raising in the people consuming it. More over by the over usage of chemicals, the lands are becoming barren and the farmer is not getting the minimum returns and he is forced to commit suicide.

Nature has solutions in itself. In this technological world we can come with a new outlook in organic farming , So now it's our prime duty to awake the farmers and educate them the pro's & con's of organic and inorganic methods where ecofriendly balance of nature is maintained, keeping the soil alive and getting healthy and safe product. It also provides employment, due to which it provides lively hood, where standards of people increase, which may lead ultimately to a healthier and economically sound nation.

OUTCOMES OF THE FIELD TRIP
DEPARTMENT OF BOTANY

As a part of experiential learning field trip was conducted by the Department of Botany to Polasa, Polesteshwara temple where from an old pond algae was collected where presence of Nostoc, Oscillatoria, Oedogonium etc was observed. In addition, visited Polasa Agricultural University to study different Agricultural techniques.

OUTCOMES OF THE FIELD TRIP

- By collection of algae from the pond, came to know about the habitats of the different types of algae.
- Analytical skills were developed where analysis of atmosphere, humidity and temperature for the growth of different types of algae can be made.
- By observing the algae, the environment needed for their growth can be assessed.
- This knowledge can be applied for growing different algae for preparation of biofertilizers etc.
- As a result of the field trip to Polasa Agricultural university, modern techniques used to improve agriculture were observed.
- Agricultural skills are developed by the students.
- Soil PH Testing, working of anemometer, rain gauge etc was also observed.
- Developed applicative knowledge where it can be put into practice to get better results in agriculture on an own where self employment can be generated.
- Also it is helpful for carrying on jobs in gardening and horticultural fields.
