Income From House property

What is Income From House property?

For the purpose of tax computation, the Income Tax Act has divided the income received by an individual into five different heads, one of them is 'Income from House property', which is the income earned by the assessee from a property. If an individual owns a house property, the rent received becomes taxable, this actual rent received or the notional rent is referred to as 'annual value'. However, if the taxpayer uses this property for operating or running a business or profession, it will not be taxed as Income from House property.

Income From House property becomes taxable if the following conditions are met:

- The house property comprises of the building and/or any land attached to it.
- The taxpayer is the owner of the property.
- The taxpayer should not use the house property to run any business or profession.

Digital banking is the digitization (moving online) of all the traditional banking activities and programs services that were historically were only available to customers when physically inside of a bank branch. This includes activities like money deposits, withdrawals and transfers.

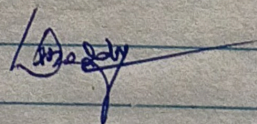

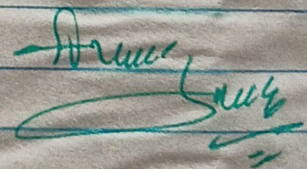

State bank of India, the country's largest financial institution, which ranks among the top 50 global banks by assets and reach, has launched an integrated omnichannel digital platform to offer financial services besides lifestyle products and services.

In a media note, the bank said the new offering "YONO", an acronym for You Only Need Once, will enable customers to avail lifestyle based services under 14 categories including booking and renting cabs, entertainment, dining, experiences, travel and stay and medical assistance.
