ABSTRACT

This study is intended to help reliance trends decide upon the steps to be taken care for customer satisfaction so that the growth of the company keeps on improving. Primary data have been used for analysis. However, secondary sources have yielded preliminary information.

Research conducted was descriptive in nature. Descriptive research helped me to develop the concept to clearly establish priorities, to divulge adequate information which helps me in indecision making and thus essential for making the study a success.

A structured questionnaire was used to obtain required information and to assess the customer satisfaction level and to find the ways through which the company can come up to the expectation of the customer so that the optimum satisfaction level can be achieved. I have used random sampling for my survey. Care was taken that the respondents were as diversified as possible. A sample size of 50 respondents was taken from Mahaboobnagar. I collected data and analyzed them. I have critically analyzed each and every question in the questionnaire and then given the managerial implication. This analyzed data was later converted into bar diagrams for convenience. This also made it easy to draw a conclusion based research and provide a presentable format for the report. Later on the information was compiled to form a presentable report. Along with this I also learnt the store operation of Reliance Trends. A better strategy to satisfy customers is only the way to gain customer attention and to penetrate more in their own catchment area. Strategy must be in all areas like Promotional offer/Scheme, Product Pricing, Employee behavior, Billing Process, Product Assortment, Product quality in terms of RATER. It is found in the research that customers are price sensitive hence Reliance trends should give those offers which can facilitate more money saving as the customers are price sensitive. Once the conservative thought would abolish, definitely the retail will grow with leap and bound, ultimately it would benefit Reliancetrends.

LITERATURE REVIEW

Marketing

Different people have defined marketing in different ways. The practice of management, Peter enterprise has two and only two basic functions: marketing and innovation. Marketing and innovation produce results; all the rest are costs. Marketing is the distinguishing, unique function

Survey Methodology:

In statistics, survey methodology is the field that studies the sampling of individuals from a population with a view towards making statistical inferences about the population using the sample. Polls about public opinion, such as political beliefs, are reported in the news media in democracies. Other types of survey are used for scientific purposes. Surveys provide important information for all kinds of research fields, e.g., marketing research, psychology, health professionals and sociology. A survey may focus on different topics such as preferences (e.g., for a presidential candidate), behavior (smoking and drinking behavior), or factual information (e.g., income), depending on its purpose. Since survey research is always based on a sample of the population, the success of the research is dependent on the representativeness of the population of concern (see also sampling (statistics) and survey sampling).

Survey methodology seeks to identify principles about the design, collection, processing, and analysis of surveys in connection to the cost and quality of survey estimates. It focuses on improving quality within cost constraints, or alternatively, reducing costs for a fixed level of quality. Survey methodology is both a scientific field and a profession. Part of the task of a survey methodologist is making a large set of decisions about thousands of individual features of a survey in order to improve it.

The most important methodological challenges of a survey methodologist include making decisions on how to:

- Identify and select potential sample members.
- Contact sampled individuals and collect data from those who are hard to reach (or reluctant to respond).
- Evaluate and test questions.
- Select the mode for posing questions and collecting responses.
- Train and supervise interviewers (if they are involved).
- Check data files for accuracy and internal consistency.

- Adjust survey estimates to correct for identified errors.

Selecting Examples:

Survey samples can be broadly divided into two types:

Probability samples and non-probability samples. Stratified sampling is a method of probability sampling such that sub-populations within an overall population are identified and included in the sample selected in a balanced way.

Methods of data collection

There are several ways of administering a survey. The choice between administration modes is influenced by several factors, including 1) costs, 2) coverage of the target population, 3) flexibility of asking questions, 4) respondents' willingness to participate and 5) response accuracy. Different methods create mode effects that change how respondents answer, and different methods have different advantages.

The most common modes of administration can be summarized as:

- Telephone
- Mail (post)
- Online surveys
- Personal in-home surveys
- Personal mall or street intercept survey
- Hybrids of the above.

Response formats

Usually, a survey consists of a number of questions that the respondent has to answer in a set format. A distinction is made between open-ended and closed-ended questions. An open-ended question asks the respondent to formulate his own answer, whereas a closed-ended question has the respondent pick an answer from a given number of options. The response options for a closed-ended question should be exhaustive and mutually exclusive. Four types of response scales for closed-ended questions are distinguished:

- Dichotomous, where the respondent has two options
- Nominal-polytomous, where the respondent has more than two unordered options .

- Ordinal-polytomous, where the respondent has more than two ordered options
- (Bounded)Continuous, where the respondent is presented with a continuous scale

A respondent's answer to an open-ended question can be coded into a response scale afterwards, or analyzed using more qualitative methods.

Interviewer effects:

Survey methodologists have devoted much effort to determine the extent to which interviewee responses are affected by physical characteristics of the interviewer. Main interviewer traits that have been demonstrated to influence survey responses are race, gender and relative body weight (BMI) . These interviewer effects are particularly operant when questions are related to the interviewer trait. Hence, race of interviewer has been shown to affect responses to measures regarding racial attitudes , interviewer sex responses to questions involving gender issues , and interviewer BMI answers to eating and dieting-related questions . While interviewer effects have been investigated mainly for face-to-face surveys, they have also been shown to exist for interview modes with no visual contact, such as telephone surveys and in video-enhanced web surveys. The explanation typically provided for interviewer effects is that of social desirability. Survey participants may attempt to project a positive self-image in an effort to conform to the norms they attribute to the interviewer asking questions.

Primary research:

Primary research consists of the collection of original primary data. It is often undertaken after the researcher has gained some insight into the issue by reviewing secondary research or by analyzing previously collected primary data. It can be accomplished through various methods, including questionnaires and telephone interviews in market research, or experiments and direct observations in the physical sciences, amongst others.

The term primary research is widely used in academic research, market research and competitive intelligence.

Secondary research:

Secondary research involves the summary, collation and/or synthesis of existing research rather than primary research, where data is collected from, for example, research subjects or experiments.

In a market research context, secondary research is taken to include the re-use by a second party of any data collected by a first party or parties.

In archaeology and landscape history, desk research is contrasted with fieldwork.

Sometimes secondary research is required in the preliminary stages of research to determine what is known already and what new data is required, or to inform research design. At other times, it may be the only research technique used.

A key performance area in secondary research is the full citation of original sources, usually in the form of a complete listing or annotated listing.

Secondary sources could include previous research reports, newspaper, magazine and journal content, and government and NGO statistics.

Questionnaire

A questionnaire is a research instrument consisting of a series of questions and other prompts for the purpose of gathering information from respondents. Although they are often designed for statistical analysis of the responses, this is not always the case. The questionnaire was invented by Sir Francis Galton.

Questionnaires have advantages over some other types of surveys in that they are cheap, do not require as much effort from the questioner as verbal or telephone surveys, and often have standardized answers that make it simple to compile data. However, such standardized answers may frustrate users. Questionnaires are also sharply limited by the fact that respondents must be able to read the questions and respond to them. Thus, for some demographic groups conducting a survey by questionnaire may not be practical.

As a type of survey, questionnaires also have many of the same problems relating to question construction and wording that exist in other types of opinion polls.

Types:

A distinction can be made between questionnaires with questions that measure separate variables, and questionnaires with questions that are aggregated into either a scale or index.^[1] Questionnaires within the former category are commonly part of surveys, whereas questionnaires in the latter category are commonly part of tests.

Questionnaires with questions that measure separate variables, could for instance include questions on:

- preferences (e.g. political party)
- behaviors (e.g. food consumption)
- facts (e.g. gender)

Questionnaires with questions that are aggregated into either a scale or index, include for instance questions that measure:

- latent traits (e.g. personality traits such as extroversion)
- attitudes (e.g. towards immigration)
- an index (e.g. Socioeconomic Status).

Question sequence

In general, questions should flow logically from one to the next. To achieve the best response rates, questions should flow from the least sensitive to the most sensitive, from the factual and behavioral to the attitudinal, and from the more general to the more specific.

Basic rules for questionnaire item construction

- Use statements which are interpreted in the same way by members of different subpopulations of the population of interest.
- Use statements where persons that have different opinions or traits will give different answers.
 - Think of having an "open" answer category after a list of answers.
 - Use only one aspect of the construct you are interested in per item.
 - Use positive statements and avoid negatives or double negatives.
 - Do not make assumptions about the respondent.
 - Use clear and comprehensible wording, easily understandable for all educational levels
 - Use correct spelling, grammar and punctuation.
 - Avoid items that contain more the one question per item

CUSTOMER SATISFACTION

Customer service is the provision of services to customers before, during and after a purchase. According to Turban service is a series of activities designed to enhance the level of customer satisfaction, that is, the feeling that a product or service has met the customer's expectations."

Its importance varies by product, industry and customer; defective or broken merchandise can be exchanged, often only with a receipt and within a specified time frame. Reliance Trends will often have a desk or counter devoted to dealing with returns, exchanges and complaints, or will perform related functions at the point of sale; the perceived success of such interactions being dependent on employees "who can adjust themselves to the personality of the guest,"

Customer service plays an important role in an organization's ability to generate income and revenue. From that perspective, customer service should be included as part of an overall approach to systematic improvement. A customer service experience can change the entire perception a customer has of the organization.

Customer support is a range of customer services to assist customers in making cost effective and correct use of a product. It includes assistance in planning, installation, training, troubleshooting, maintenance, upgrading, and disposal of a product.

A multi-task position drawing on extensive CUSTOMER SERVICE experience to advance a proven track record for developing and maintaining key accounts and improving departmental efficiencies.

Objectives of Customer Services

- Provide customers and staff with clear standards and expectations.
- Ensure all the customers contact reaches appropriate conclusions.
- Minimize incidences of repeat contact
- Seek to provide a seamless service for customers
- Provide equal and easy access to our services at a time, place and channel that meet the needs of residents, businesses and other stakeholders
- Cater for customer needs irrespective of age, gender, physical or financial ability, ethnic origin, race, religion or geographical location
- Provide a prompt, courteous and knowledgeable response to all customer enquiries.
- Equip our staff to provide customers with an excellent standard of service.
- Enable our customers to provide feedback easily, through complaints, customer surveys, etc.
- Use customer compliments, comments and complaints to drive improvements to service.
- Improve the speed, quality and consistency of response to enquiries by having our information in a format that can be easily accessed

Customer Segmentation of Reliance trends

- Reliance trends target higher & upper middle class customers.
- The large and growing young working population is a preferred customer segment.
- Reliance trends specially targets working women & home markets who are the primary decision makers.
- Reliance also targets the young population of the country as they will follow fashion. Good customer service is the lifeblood of any business. You can offer promotions and slash prices to bring in as many new customers as you want, but unless you can get some of those customers to come back, your business won't be profitable for long. Good customer service is all about bringing customers back. And about sending them away happily - happy enough to pass positive feedback about your business along to others, who may then try the product or service you offer for themselves and in turn become repeat customers.

The field of my research is Customer Satisfaction

Many firms are interested in understanding what their customers think about their shopping or purchase experience, because finding new customers is generally more costly and difficult than servicing existing or repeat customers.

Such research provides a wider scope to the firms in terms of high customer satisfaction

Definition:

CUSTOMER SATISFACTION

Customer Satisfaction, business term of how the products and the services supplied by the company meet or surpass the customer expectation. It is the key performance indicator within the business. Customer satisfaction can be greatly achieved by imparting Customer Relationship Management (CRM) in the company.

BUSINESS TECHNIQUES OF CUSTOMER SATISFACTION

- One of the key customer satisfaction techniques is the need to provide front line employees with the ability to respond to customer situations quickly without the need to
- Innovation drives customers' satisfaction. As customers' needs keep changing, an innovation-driven company is able to exceed customers' expectations.
- To provide after sale services.
 - Listen actively and carefully.
 - Anticipate that the customer will be asking questions. They may be easy, they may be hard. But encourage them anyway. If you cannot provide an answer, promise to find out the answer from someone who can.
- Be patient, look from the customer's point of view and work from there. This point of view will always give you the best outlook on the situation.
- Always keep a smile on your face when dealing with customers which can lead to customer satisfaction. This positive attitude can rub off and turn a potentially negative situation into a positive experience

RECENT METHODS THAT TODAY'S FIRM ADOPT TO INCREASE THE CUSTOMER SATISFACTION

In order to stay competitive and remain profitable, businesses have to focus on the quality of their customer service. Companies that invest time, energy and money into developing and nurturing quality so customers can have a satisfactory experience are going to be more profitable and better likely to experience more sustained growth over the long-term.

Customer-Centric Attitude

Operations should be customer-centric meaning that the customer's best interests should always be foremost. Service should be offered in a helpful way and with a smile. Both management and employees should show interest towards the customer and strive to give them a good experience.

Today's companies must strive even harder than abiding by this golden rule of customer service.

Customer care

Is something which is done even after the product is purchased. Many companies are interested in knowing the reason why consumers have purchased the goods and services or even the goods are not purchased. Managers interested in customer care try to collect a database as to why the customers have purchased the competitors product and service and what will be the level of satisfaction if it is introduced in our product or service. And also to find the level of expectations and their level of dissatisfaction.

Customer focus

Is attained when everyone in the organization makes efforts to focus the activities towards the satisfaction of the customers right from the stage of new product planning and to product modification to the stage of elimination of the goods and services everything revolves around the customers. All the activities are focused on customer satisfaction.

Customer Service Training

Another strategy to improve customer satisfaction is to invest in customer service training. All employees should be on board with how to treat customers and help them gain a valued experience. The quality of customer service can easily make or break a business.

The experience the people have received is the most important aspect in selling pure services or services with tangible goods. Once the customer is satisfied with the service his loyalty towards that product or company is at its peak.

Companies today are doing a lot of self- introspection that they are really giving the said services to the customers.

Companies are spending more money and time to see that the services are evaluated and improved as per the expectations of the customers. In fact , the companies globally known for their services are always in the process of finding opportunities to improve on the quality of the services. Better results can be seen when the organization makes use of external, internal, and interactive marketing.

Communication

Communication with customers is also important. It's a good idea to always provide customers with ways they can contact you and offer ways to contact them (if they choose). Offering e-mail, telephone line, web contact or other ways for customers to offer comments and/or complaints is of value.

Customer Relationship Management Software

Customer Relationship Management is a process of managing detailed information about individual customers and carefully managing all the customers touch points with the aim of maximizing customer satisfaction and customer loyalty.

Customer Relationship Management Software. Customer relationship management (CRM) software has become a strategy many companies employ to help increase customer satisfaction. Through using CRM tools and accompanying philosophy, businesses can examine and analyze what customers want and strive to meet this demand before they even walk in the door.

BENEFITS

- CRM aims at individual customers. It tries to develop customers' relationships by looking into his needs and requirements.
- CRM helps in two way communication by understanding the messages of the customers and responding to it. Thereby gaining customer loyalty.
- CRM helps to customize the products and thereby reducing the rate of customer defection.
- CRM tells the company what product or service the customer needs today and what it will need in future.

Ask for Feedback

Being interested in customer feedback is always a valuable practice to engage in to increase customer satisfaction. What better strategy and technique to find out how to satisfy your customers than to ask them?

Surveys, questionnaires, talking to customers as they shop, and then following up with calls or e

Mails are all good ways to get feedback.

Quality Control

Quality is important to customer satisfaction and the level of quality directly plays into a business' ability to meet customer expectations. Quality should be monitored for both service and the type of products offered; as a part of this guarantees the willingness to stand behind service and/or products is necessary.

Creating Customer Delight

Customer delight is when the standard of the goods and services are much higher than the expectations of the customers , this not only satisfies them but surprises and delight them. To create customer delight the company will not only increase the standard of service but will train its personnel to deliver in its best possible manner the services as expected by the customers.

Customer delight depends on the reliability factor of the company. This is the ability to perform what has been promised to the customer. Companies who focus on customer delights should be dependable and have accuracy in delivering the services to the customers.

Companies with much attitude of empathy and always paying individual attention to its customers which in turn builds customer delight. The advantage is manifold because it creates brand loyalty and customer loyalty.

Significance of Customer Satisfaction Research

In a competitive marketplace where businesses compete for customers, customer satisfaction is seen as a key differentiator and increasingly has become a key element of business strategy.

Customer satisfaction not only creates loyalty among the customers but it increases the goodwill of the company by uplifting the market value of the brand.

Customer researches are conducted to answer the basic questions like who our customers are?

What do they like to buy?,

When do they buy and how do they buy?, it examines the taste, preferences and the attitude of the customers. Mostly it tends to become qualitative motivational research of customer behavior.

Here, the self concept, ego, personality and lifestyle of the consumers are studied. There is an attempt to study the beliefs, opinions of the customers.

By conducting such research the company can minimize its defects in the field of production and can deliver high quality of services in relation to its competitors. Such research can be carried by conducting surveys through interviews and questionnaire methods. These questionnaire methods form a path of getting the customers positive and negative feedback. The company can then respond to feedback and can retain the existing customers as well preventing them from shifting to other brands.

A customer complaint could be the insight you have been seeking to learn why a certain product isn't moving. It can also be an indicator of personnel problems. If a customer mentions that an item does not work properly, you can research and try to recreate the problem, potentially finding a fix that will increase sales. A customer's complaint about an employee's lack of knowledge may reveal a need for more extensive training, while a grievance about poor customer service provides the chance to address it with your staff.

By doing so it creates confidence among the customers , leading to word-to-mouth publicity which is more effective rather than t.v. commercials

Why measure Customer Satisfaction?

Customer satisfaction is tied directly to profitability. Well-established research by Bain & Company found that, for many companies, an increase of 5% in customer retention can increase profits by 25% to 95%. The same study found that it costs six to seven times more to gain a new customer than to keep an existing one.

It is important to consistently measure and monitor that input. Without an effective customer satisfaction research program in place, the company will be losing business, missing opportunities, and putting itself at a competitive disadvantage. In order to measure the customer satisfaction a Customer Satisfaction Survey has to be carried out. A closer look at how to formulate survey questions.

1. When to Conduct Customer Satisfaction Research?

The answer depends on the size of the customer base and the purpose of the research. There are two key types of surveys, and they serve very different purposes: Transactional surveys. solicit* feedback directly from the product or service user about that particular encounter.

They are conducted immediately after each customer transaction. * Relationship surveys. collect input from people who have an ongoing relationship with the company and have had multiple transactions. The respondents typically are responsible for deciding whether to continue the working relationship. In many cases conducting both transactional and relationship surveys may be appropriate.

2. How to distribute the survey?

The best means of distributing a survey depends on whether it is a transactional or relationship survey. A transactional survey is conducted at the point of customer contact. Relationship surveys, on the other hand, are most cost-effectively conducted online. Online data collection offers significant advantages over other modes of interviewing customers, and you should use it whenever possible. The advantages include:

*Speed. The Internet offers instantaneous distribution of surveys and real-time accumulation and tabulation of results. This allows for immediate data analysis, even while the survey is still in progress. The faster responses arrive, the faster they can be addressed. In contrast, mail surveys suffer from long lag times and low response rates.

*Candor. This is essential for research on sensitive subject matter where studies indicate people are more likely to answer questions honestly on the Web than they are on the phone or in personal interviews. Such responses provide insight into what a company is doing well and frequently provide warning signs about the health of the business relationship. *Cost. The Internet eliminates postage and telephone costs as well as basic materials like paper, staples, envelopes, and printing. Because it is self-directed, there is no interviewer cost. Finally, it's more convenient.

PROMOTIONAL
RELIANCE TRENDS

Promotional activities done by Reliance trends for driving more customers into the store:

Reliance trends is doing different types of promotional activities with a main aim of bringing in more customers into the stores.

Reliance is focusing on attracting customers through different types of walkin driven activities, some of the activities done by Reliance trends in the past 2 years are as below.

- Media plan
- Leaflets distribution & balloon distribution
- Guess the price challenge
- Event plans
- Trend stylish
- Seasonal offers
- Sponsoring college fests and corporate launches.

1. Media plan:

Media plan involves communication through different media such as

- Print media
- Social media
- Radio
- Cinema
- Outdoor communication

Print media:

Reliance trends is using the print media as one of its promotional activities, Reliance spends lot of money in printing its advertisements in the most major news dailies. The advertisements will be printed mostly on the weekends (Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays) in such a way that the advertisements will grab the reader's attentions and making them to come into the stores, which will not only increase the footfall of the store but also increase the revenue by attracting the people to make a purchase.

Social media:

With the ever increasing usage of the internet in the country, most of the population is using social networking sites such as Facebook, twitter.

Reliance is having its own brand pages and groups in the face book, with the help of which Reliance is doing some campaigns in the social networking sites for promoting its brands, new offers and creating brand awareness to the people.

Radio:

Reliance trends has its own radio channel called Radio trends which will announce the offers in the stores all the time, making the customers who enter the store know about all the offers.

Other than its own radio channel Reliance trends is using some other radio channels for its promotions. In the radio channels like Radio mirchi, Big fm, radio city, radio one, indigo etc.. Reliance is announcing its advertisements in a very high frequency in the major cities where there are Reliance trends stores with a main aim of bringing more customers into the stores.

Cinema:

Reliance trends is using cinema plan as one of its promotional activities, they are selecting the best multiplexes and single screen theaters in the catchment areas where the multiplexes and the single screen theaters are popular and more people will be visiting these multiplexes.

Cinema plan is being used in the most major cities like Delhi, Mumbai, Hyderabad, Chennai, Bangalore and these ads will be given mostly on the weekends (Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays).

Reliance will never give its ads in televisions, viewers may change the channels at the time of advertisements so we cannot measure the usefulness of the television ads. But the viewers have to watch the advertisements in the cinemas and the multiplexes as the ads will be given before the start of the films and in the breaks.

1. Outdoor communication:

Reliance trends is using banners and hoardings as the outdoor communication. Reliance is placing the attractive banners and hoardings with its offers in the best catchment locations where the flow of population was very high.

2. Leaflets and balloons distribution:

Reliance used to hire some guys for distributing the leaflets and balloons in the selected catchment areas. They will do this mostly on weekends and at the time of special offers. This leaflets distribution is basically for increasing footfall to the store and thereby converting the people who enter the store into the final customers. I have observed that many people who have taken the leaflets have entered the stores.

3. Guess the price challenge:

Reliance trends will hire two or three volunteers for engaging the crowd in the places where this activity is being conducted.

The volunteers will find well dressed and good looking people, give them a chance to guess the price of the merchandise. If they guess the price correctly they will be given some discount coupons. Almost everyone who gets the discount coupon will enter into the stores and try some apparels in the stores.

It will drive more walkins into the store and make them do a purchase as well.

4. Events plan:

Reliance used to hire some event organizing companies and they will do different types of events for attracting the customers to come into the stores.

- Scratch and win
- Puzzle game
- Get clicked with your loved ones.

Puzzle game

A board with Reliance trends logo will be placed on a stand at the store & some portions of the reliance trends logo will be removed, customers have to find the missing portions of the logo.

The same portion which have been removed from the logo will be distributed in the store catchments in large numbers by promoters asking customers to participate for Puzzle game at Reliance trends outlet to win surprise gift

Scratch and win

- Promoters will be holding a bunch of balloons at the catchments & asking customers to pick any one of those bunch of balloons and break it.
- After breaking the balloons customers will get a scratch card which allows them to get an assured discount of 10% to 20%.
- Customers will visit the store, and shop for some amount to redeem the free discounts.
- This will make more customers come into the store as they are getting free discounts.

Get clicked with your loved ones

- Promoters will go to catchments, ask the customers to get clicked with loved ones & get an instant photo along with coupons.
- A stage will be kept in the store to click the customers.
- Promoters & printing machines will be kept to give instant photographs to customers.
- This will attract more customers to enter into the stores as they were getting the photograph for free of cost.
- Customers will also be given an additional discount voucher which will allow customers to try some apparels inside the store.

5. Trend stylish:

- Reliance will hire 2 or 3 volunteers for engaging the crowd in the malls and the catchment locations.
- The volunteers will find a well dressed, good walking, good looking person and stylish person and immediately will give that person a discount voucher and announce them as the Trends Stylish by announcing them as Trends Stylish.
- All the people who got the discount voucher will come back to the stores to redeem the coupons.

6. Seasonal offers:

Reliance will also do more promotions for the seasonal festivals like children day, Fathers day, Valentines day, Mothers day, Independence Day etc with different types of discounts and offers related to that specific day of festival for bringing in more customers into the stores.

The research design is exploratory till identification of customer services parameters. Later it becomes descriptive when it comes to evaluating customer perception of customer service of the Reliance trends.

Descriptive research, also known as statistical research, describes data and characteristics about the population or phenomenon being studied. Descriptive research answers the questions of who, what, where, when and how.

Although the data description is factual, accurate and systematic, the research cannot describe what caused a situation. Thus, descriptive research cannot be used to create a causal relationship, where one variable affects another. In other words, descriptive research can be said to have a low requirement for internal validity.

The description is used for frequencies, averages and other statistical calculations. Often the best approach, prior to writing descriptive research, is to conduct a survey investigation.

Qualitative research often has the aim of description and researchers may follow-up with examinations of why the observations exist and what the implications of the findings are.

RESEARCH SAMPLE

CONCLUSION

CONCLUSION

From the above findings the following are the conclusions on customer satisfaction with regards to Reliance Trends. From the study we conclude that all the customers are not fully satisfied with not only Reliance Trends but also with the remaining competitors of reliance trends, customers are finding some faults with every apparel store.

The customers entering into the store are happy with the offers available in the store that the offers are good value for their money. But from my observation I can conclude that Reliance trends was spending a lot of money for different types of marketing and promotional activities for driving more customers into the stores, but Reliance was not concentrating on converting the people who entered the store into final customers.

After conducting a thorough survey and research on Reliance Trends it is observed that it has been perceived as a good brand. It has good customer loyalty and also attracts a large number of new customers. It also offers its customers a unique shopping experience a few brands can offer.

It also got an advantage of its locations situated in commercial locations. There are a good number of Reliance Trends stores located across the city which makes it easy for customers to access the store. Customers seemed to be happy when it came to the layout of the store, the merchandise, and cleanliness of the store, ambience, etc.

Consumers have high expectations from Reliance Trends regarding pricing; they expect a good collection of clothes at much cheaper price. A lot of awareness programs may help in getting better footfall .

The future for Reliance Trends indeed seems to be bright and it should continue to do well as seems apparent from the response of the customers.
