Mahboob Mohammad is Lecturer of Foreign Languages at the South Asia Studies Department at the University of Pennsylvania. Before relocating to Penn, he has taught at the University of Wisconsin and the University of Texas at Austin for more than a decade. His courses on South Asia and the Novel, Indian Poetry and Religions, Resistance literatures of South Asia, Islamic cultures and literatures of South Asia usually blend various sources of Urdu, Hindi and Telugu languages. Recently, Mahboob has expanded his research and teaching to new areas such as urban practices of Islam and Sufism in South India. He has published more than a dozen essays in various scholarly journals and edited volumes published in the USA and Europe.

Mahboob is currently working on two books: 1. A Garden of Mirrors: Vernacular Sufi Poetics in South India, with a focus on contemporary Muslim writing in Telugu and Urdu; 2. Witnessing Police Action: Hindu-Muslim Dialogue and the Public Sphere in Telangana, 1948 to the present. Archival completed, chapters currently being drafted.

Mahboob is a celebrated poet, short story writer and literary critic in his home language Telugu. He has published four volumes of poetry in Telugu and recognized as a trend-setting poet and literary critic. His writings on local Hindu-Muslim interfaces in Andhra/Telangana have created huge debates and controversies too. His two books on literary essays have opened up new questions of representations and resistance in the Telugu literary culture. He won the India's prestigious national award "Saraswathi Bhasha Samman" for his contributions to Telugu poetry since 1980. He is now editing a Telugu web weekly magazine "Saranga."
