| Event Report in brief : | Prerequisite: Being the students of History, the students are taught the how the geographical factors are responsible for the formation of history of any country and how the history is written based on the sources there. The students understood how the different schools of history have developed History writing as per their view point. Content : The Department of History, has conducted workshop on Writing History. The Speaker is Prof. Adapa Satyanarayana, retired Professor from Osmania University, Hyderabad is a most experienced and Professor. History writing in its modern sense emerged from on imperialist tradition of hero making biography and subsequent Nationalist defense. It has been believed that India has no sense of history and alleged absence of historiography in India. But books like Rajatarangini of Kalhana and abhignanashakuntalam and Malavikagnamitram of kalidasa have been with the sense of history of the period. |
| Student's Feedback: | In this workshop the students were exposed to different schools of History writing in India. The students were informed that how the same sources were interpreted differently in writing History as per the schools of History. This helps the students to write the history of their villages. The students showed interest in attending more workshops like this. |
