Sub: Business Organisation & Financial Management

Topic: Accounting Concepts

Date:

Accounting Concepts

Accounting concepts mean the assumption or conditions upon which accountancy is based.

First of all we need to know about Accounting.

Accounting is a recording, classifying, summarising, analysing and interpreting of business transactions. It has a wider scope and includes book-keeping and analysis, interpretation of business information. It requires special skill and knowledge. It is done by senior staff and accountants with higher level of knowledge. It critically analyses and interprets the business transactions and shows the complete picture of the financial condition of the business. Legal formalities can be complied with the help of accounting. It provides information for taking managerial decisions. Accounts has several branches like cost accounting management accounts etc.

Advantages of Accounting:

1) Innumerable monetary transactions occur in a business organisation. Accounting keeps a systematic record of such transactions.

- 2) When a business maintains a complete record of its transactions it has complete information about expenses, losses, incomes and gains, hence, it can easily ascertain the net loss for any period.
- 3) When accounting records are available over a period of time it can compare the results of its business from year to year and study the progress of business over a period of time.
- 4) Accounting records will help a concern to know not only its net profit or net loss but also the exact reasons that has contributed to the profit or loss.
- 5) Accounting records enable a business concern to keep effective control over its activities. For this reason accounting records are called "the eyes and ears of a business".

Limitations of Financial Accounting

- 1) Financial Accounting is historical in nature
- 2) Financial accounting does not provide detailed analysis.
- 3) It ignores non-monetary information.
- 4) Financial accounting does not reveal the efficiency of a business concern.

Users of Accounting Information

Accounting is the language used to communicate financial information of a concern to various parties who are interested in such information. The parties that may be interested in accounting information are as follows:

- 1) Owners
- 2) Creditors
- 3) Prospective Investors
- 4) Management
- 5) Government.

Topic : Gender Equality.

Achieving Gender Equality in India,
what works, and what doesn't
— Srushti Sharma

Explained about the writer:-

Smriti Sharma was born and brought-up in India. She completed her phd at Delhi school of Economics. Now she is a lecturer in Economics at Newcastle University Business School, England. Her research interests are in behavioural economics, development economics and labour economics. She also works on the topics related to caste and gender discrimination. The present essay deals with how we can achieve gender equality in India and what work has and what doesn't work for it.

Explained about the text:- Discrimination against women and girls is a pervasive and long-running phenomenon that characterises Indian society at every level.

India's progress towards gender equality, measured by its position on rankings such as the Gender Development Index has been disappointing, despite fairly rapid rates of economic growth.

In the past decade, while Indian GDP has grown by around 6%, there has been a large decline in female labour force participation from 34% to 27%. An evaluation study found that job security, visits to villages to provide information to young women led to positive effects on the labour market - participation and enrolment in professional training.

It is sad to note that in rural India, a female child is treated as less as male child is treated as beneficial. It means there is no change in the attitudes of people in our country. Our society is still patriarchal. It means we are still in male dominated society. Parents think that they would be look after in their old age only by their male child so they look down their daughters. They hesitate to spend more money on girls, health and education. Dowry system is another factor.

Conclusion - Educating Indian children from an early age about the importance of gender equality could be a meaningful start in that direction.

- while increasingly representation of women in the public spheres is important and can potentially be attained through some form of affirmative action, an attitudinal shift is essential for women to be considered as equal within their homes and in broader society.

Topic - "THE POISON TREE"

Explain about the writer!

The poem 'The Poison Tree' is written by William Blake, one of the most fascinating Romantic Era poets. He is a master of the English language in more ways. The poem is taken from "Songs of Experience". The poem illustrates about the consequence of the uncontrollable anger.

About the poet :-

The poet tells that he is angry with his enemy too, didn't tell him about it and so his anger got bigger and bigger.

The speaker compares his angry with a plant and tells how he nourishes it.

The speaker talks about how his anger grows with his enemy. He treats the anger very much like a plant.

Car club in, — A plant needs water and sun in order to grow, and so apparently does his anger. He watered it with his "tears" and his "tears" did make sure he got plenty of sunshine. He exposes the plant to sunshine with his "smiles" and deceitful wiles. They help the plant to grow — like real sunshine would for a real plant.

Topic - The Rising of the moon

Explain about the poet!

The play 'The Ribbry of the Moon' is written by Lady Gregory, a prominent Irish play writer, folklorist and the manager. The Ribbry of the Moon is a political play like written in the background of the Irish struggle for independence and freedom from British rule. The play projects two central characters - the sergeant, who represents the state and, the patriot, a fugitive who is fighting for independence.

About the text! - while waiting at the quay the sergeant sees a ragged man. He invites the man to leave that place immediately. The ragged man introduces himself to be a poor ballad singer and asks to sell some ballads to the sailor and make money but the sergeant refuses. The man sees the lookout notice post.

- on the barrel and says to the sergeant - that he knows the man they are looking for.

The sergeant is waiting at the quay suspecting that the fugitive may escape from that point. Then he sees a ragged man moving towards the water. The sergeant warns him not to go that side.

Conclusion :- The man says that he is a poor - ballad singer and wants to make money by selling the songs to the sailors. The sergeant becomes angry and tells him to leave the place immediately. The man reads the contrary on the lookout - notice posted to the barrel and says to the sergeant - that he knows the escaped man very well.

Explain about the writer

Smriti Sharma was born and brought-up in India. She completed her ph.D at Delhi School of Economics. Now she is a lecturer in Economics at Newcastle University Business School, England. Her research interests are in behavioural Economics, development economics and labour economics. She also works on the topics related to caste and gender discrimination. The present-essay deals with how we can achieve gender equality in India and what works and what doesn't work.

Explain about the text

Discrimination against women and girls is a pervasive and long-running phenomenon that characterises Indian society at every level.

India's progress towards gender equality, measured by its position

- on rankings such as the Gender Dev Index has been disappointing despite fast rapid rates of economic growth.

In the past decade, while India's GDP has grown by around 6%, there has been a large decline in female labour force participation from 34% to 27%.

An influential randomisation study found that job recruiter visits to villages to provide information to young women led to positive effects on their labour market participation and enrolment in professional training.

For India to maintain its position as a global growth leader, more concerted efforts at local and national levels, and by the private sector are needed to bring women to parity with men.

Conclusion + Educating Indian children from an early age about the importance of gender equality could be a meaningful start in that direction.
