Solid waste management- Utilization of broken pots used for providing water for Birds

Department of Botany, Eco club & NSS Units –II, III

Date: 20-04-2022

It has been observed that pot manufacturers do not keep manufacturing defective pots for sale. When a pile of manufacturing problem pots was spotted at the pot maker's site, we came up with the concept of using these pots to preserve water for birds in the Botanical Garden during the summer season, when water is limited, and also to keep food grains for birds.

Department of botany and NSS II and III unit volunteers gather various sized and shaped manufacturing problem pots from Potter's House for free. These pots are filled with water and placed throughout the Botanical Garden to quench the thirst of the birds. Some pots loaded with food grains are stored in the Botanical Garden at various points to feed hungry birds. This is done on a regular basis.

Recycling of Plastic Bottles

DEPARTMENT OF BOTANY & ECO CLUB

Date: 28-04-2022

Plastic is incredibly resilient, flexible, and cheap to create. Sadly, it has terrible negative effects on the ecosystem. In fact, we use so much plastic that every year, 12 million metric tonnes of it are dumped into the ocean, which is terrible. Once there, the plastic waste degrades into tiny plastic particles called micro plastics, which end up in the eggs of birds and fish and eventually build up in the marine food chain.

In view of this, The Department of Botany with the help of students collected the used plastic bottles and reused them for the growth of plants by filling the soil.

Organic farming supports environmental health by lowering the amount of pollution, because there are fewer residues in the product, there are fewer risks to human and animal health. It aids in sustaining agricultural production at a certain level. It enhances soil health and lowers the cost of agricultural output.

As a result, the Department of Botany first taught the students the value of organic farming, and the students in turn educated the farmers by visiting the fields in Koduparthi Village.

Date: 07-06-2022

Dr. Burgula Ramakrishna Rao Government Degree College, Department of Botany, Eco Club, and Department of Women Empowerment jointly organised a programme on "Awareness and Exhibition on Food Safety" on June 7. College Principal Dr Ch. Appiya Chinnamma, who presided over the event, said our ancestors were healthy and strong by consuming fermented foods. In today's modern age, people are getting sick due to the use of chemical fertilisers and an unbalanced diet, and students are urged to take nutritious food to stay healthy. Women Empowerment Department convener N. Subhashini said in the business world the cultivation of commercial crops has outpaced food grains. Food shortages for the growing population will screen the problem of adulteration. Food security is essential for leading a healthy life.

Bhargavi Lata, Lecture in English was the keynote speaker at the event and said the students were made aware of the techniques and simple methods of creating delicious nutrition at low cost and with less effort as good food provides health. Sprouts, fiber, fresh fruits, greens, honey, and lukewarm water are said to be the right doctors for our health. The program was coordinated by a botany teacher, Lata. The event was attended by faculty members Ramadevi, Kavitha, Madhavi Latha, Vittal, Bala Raju, Sreenu, and students.
