1. About the Course:

The study of growing and selling flowers and foliage plants is known as floriculture or flower farming. Floriculture is the practice of growing flowering and ornamental plants for retail sales or use as raw materials in the pharmaceutical, cosmetic, and fragrance industries. Creating planting materials from seeds, cuttings, budding, and grafting is also included. The practice of floriculture is turning into a requirement for clean air in urban areas. The professionals involved in this industry are known as floriculturists.

Flowers were grown for domestic purposes like crafting garlands and bouquets as well as for a variety of occasions like weddings, birthdays, religious offerings, and other social events. Cut flower cultivation for local and international trade is a relatively new practice in our nation.

Floriculture in India

In India, floriculture is a traditional form of agriculture with enormous potential for helping small and marginal farmers create profitable self-employment. As living conditions have risen and people's awareness of the need to live sustainably has grown, there has been an increase in demand for floriculture goods in both developed and developing nations. As a result, it has become a successful agricultural industry in India and around the world. Over the past ten years, floriculture production and commerce have steadily expanded. The floriculture sector in India includes the trading in flowers, the manufacture of nursery and potted plants, the production of seeds and bulbs, micropropagation, and the extraction of essential oils.
